

Lyndoch: more spent on lawyers and consultants than food

Description

Would you like a lawyer with that? Figures reveal Lyndoch has spent less on food in the past two years than on expert advice.
Image: Shutterstock

Carol Altmann – The Terrier

In the past two years, Lyndoch Living spent more on lawyers, consultants and accountants than it did on food for residents.

In 2018 and 2019, Lyndoch shelled out an astonishing $2.318 million on accountants, lawyers and consultants, while it spent $2.194 million on food supplies.

In 2018, the gap between the two was especially stark, with less than $1 million spent on food supplies – $994,068 – compared with $1.238 million on accountants, lawyers and consultants.

	Note	2019	2018
		$	$
		(Restated)
Note 3.1: Breakdown of operating expenditure
Administration and other expenses		1,924,854	1,443,638
Advertising, marketing and sponsorship		347,571	376,687
Audit, legal and consultancy		1,080,105	1,238,264
Capital works write-off		-	378,500
Community based client services		2,026,472	3,271,178
Domestic supplies		616,949	553,321
Food supplies		1,200,238	994,068
Information technology		837,266	653,652
Medical supplies		404,351	285,869
Power, light and heat		514,457	390,174
Repair and maintenance		480,788	451,952
Total operating expenditure		9,433,051	10,037,303

Chew on that for a moment and I suspect you will feel the same sense of indigestion that came over me.

These unpalatable facts are among the many that fall out when you take a close look at Lyndoch's financial statements – and a lot of terriers are now taking a good, hard look at the figures, both old and new.

This is how we know that in 2013 the food bill was $992,516, which is not that far off the $994,068 that was spent five years' later.

Did I miss something? Has the cost of groceries gone down?

I can tell you that what residents pay to live in a nursing home has certainly not gone down nor stayed the same for the past five years.

If you are going to cut costs, surely as an aged care home you don't start with the food bill?

Judging by the 2019 financials, there is plenty of fat to trim elsewhere, starting with administration costs and the ever-growing number of staff in the corporate area (59 and counting).

Not surprisingly, the cost of food vs lawyers/consultants/auditors was not mentioned at the Lyndoch Living annual general meeting last October and we can only make the comparison now because of two things:

The full figures have finally been released via the Australian Charities and Not-for-Profits Commission, and, for the first time, legal fees and consultants' fees have been published in the audited statements.

Lyndoch Living bought the Warrnambool Medical Centre business for $1.3 million and plans to relocate it to a new building at Lyndoch.

Speaking of auditors, wow, has that bill shot through the roof.

Last year, Lyndoch's auditing costs tripled from $13,950 in 2018 to $48,500 in 2019, which is five times what Lyndoch paid for auditing in 2013 ($9800).

Lyndoch changed auditors from local firm McLaren Hunt (which used to be Coffey Hunt) and replaced them with RSM Australia.

Perhaps a stack more number crunching needed to be done because Lyndoch decided to become a company limited by guarantee, buy two medical centres and also the May Noonan nursing home in Terang (I will write more about the medical centres soon).

But even the auditors were paid small beans compared with the $2.25 million spent on lawyers and consultants in the past two years.

$2.25 million.

Oh my goodness, I really am in the wrong business.

This $2.25 million would include hiring consultants for the $100 million masterplan and to write the \(secret\) business plan for the new medical centre

that Lyndoch intends to start building soon, even though it's still not sure how much money it needs to borrow to pay for it.

The lawyers, I assume, would also have been hired to guide the masterplan, to set up Lyndoch Healthcare Pty Ltd, and to oversee how Lyndoch now operates as a company limited by guarantee.

Company secretary

The following person held the position of company secretary at the end of the financial year.

Ms Lyanne Vinecombe
Qualifications:	Assumed the role of Company Secretary 2 years ago/Retained solicitor provides guidance as required.
Experience:	15 years as Board Secretariat.

There are also the less obvious fees, such as the solicitor “retained” to provide advice to the company secretary, who doesn’t have legal or accounting qualifications.

All of this – millions of dollars in consulting, legal, accounting and administration bills – is such a long, long way from where Lyndoch started as a much-loved, community owned facility for our aged to see out their final years in comfort.

Back in the beginning, people donated their time and their own money to make sure Lyndoch found its feet and this is why there remains such a strong, emotional connection between Warrnambool and our iconic aged care home.

The board needs to get that.

Lyndoch has to grow and keep up with the times, we all get that, but how it is growing – and at what cost – remains at the heart of this investigation and we will keep going.

More soon.

If you would like to see The Terrier keep digging, click on the link below to throw something in the tip jar.

Category

1. Opinion

Tags

1. accountability
2. accounting
3. audits
4. board
5. budget
6. consultants
7. figures
8. financials
9. food
10. lawyers
11. Lyndoch history.

12. Lyndoch Living
13. Warrnambool Medical Clinic

Date Created

2020/02/09

Author

carol